Delicious

Ovaltine

Restores and Energises

EVERY nurse realises how much depends upon her own fitness and cheerfulness in all the difficult conditions she may meet. It is for this reason that so many nurses make 'Ovaltine' their regular daily beverage. They know from experience that delicious 'Ovaltine' is the cup that cheers, and helps to restore and sustain strength and energy throughout the busiest day or night.

Scientifically prepared from Nature's finest foods, 'Ovaltine' provides in a concentrated and balanced form, the nutritive elements most needed for creating vitality and building up body, brain and nerves.

For the patients, too, the restorative properties of 'Ovaltine,' its deliciousness and exceptional ease of assimilation are of especial value. It is readily acceptable and palatable even where the digestive system is impaired. Such outstanding qualities have made 'Ovaltine' the food beverage most widely used in Hospitals and Nursing Homes throughout the world.

Free Lecturers and Films—The proprietors of 'Ovaltine' provide—free of cost—the services of a Lecturer and the display of interesting cinematograph films to Nursing Institutes and Colleges. Write for details to "Lecturer," A. Wander Ltd., 184, Queen's Gate, London, S.W.7.

Refreshing!

Clean, cool and stimulating, the flavour and tonic action of Kolynos Dental Cream on the oral tissues will help in securing your patient's co-operation in cleansing the teeth with the regularity you advise. Patients are too often apt to regard flavour as the determining factor in the selection of a toothpaste. The real function of a dentrifrice is the effective removal of food debris. With Kolynos this is ensured by the gently abrasive action of precipitated chalk and the searching solvent action of its ingredients on the mucin to which food particles cling.

However, the pleasant, clean, fresh mint flavour and the refreshing 'after taste' do much to enhance the steadily increasing popularity of Kolynos Dental Cream with both youthful and adult patients.

CERTIFICATE IN INDUSTRIAL NURSING

A Course of Training in Industrial Nursing has been instituted at the Birmingham Accident Hospital and the University of Birmingham for a limited number of State-Registered Nurses. The course will extend over one year, but nurses can join at the April, September or January terms. A certificate will be awarded to approved candidates upon the results of the year's work and of an examination.

Nurses admitted to the course will be required to live in at the Hospital and carry out the duties of Staff Nurses during their residence in Hospital. The course in industrial nursing will consist of:—

1. At least 50 lectures dealing with medical and social aspects of factory life.
2. Visits and demonstrations at works.
3. Training in special hospital practice.

Nurses resident at the Hospital will be paid at the rate of £92 10s., rising to £100 per annum on April 1st, 1943; of this amount £15 will be deducted for training fees by equal monthly instalments.

Applications should be made to the Matron of the Hospital, from whom further particulars may be obtained.

The next course, for which there are a limited number of vacancies, will begin in September, 1943.

NON-RESIDENT NURSES

The lectures and certain visits and demonstrations will be open to selected State-Registered Nurses already in industry, who will be eligible to sit for the Certificate if they were employed in industry at April 28th, 1942. Fee £5 5s. 0d. for each of the three terms of the course.

JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF NURSING

Nursing Times

VOL. XXXIX. No. 1989 SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 1943

EDITOR: MISS K. F. ARMSTRONG, S.R.N., S.C.M., DIPLOMA IN NURSING, LONDON UNIVERSITY

The Right Basis

THE Royal College of Nursing enjoyed most interesting and helpful Annual Meetings and Conferences last week, and everyone who had the privilege of attending the many crowded meetings came away stimulated to meet their problems with a new confidence, and inspired with fresh hopes for the future of what our President so aptly called 'our beloved profession.' To those who were not so lucky as to have the opportunity to be present we shall, this week and next, give as much of the spirit and matter of the meetings as the art of the pen and the scope of the paper supply make possible.

There is something about these occasions which it is difficult to convey, and which reached its highlight perhaps in the address which the Rev. Dr. Donald Soper, M.A., of the West London Mission, Kingsway Hall, gave at the well attended service held on Thursday morning, in the Church of St. Peter, Vere Street. He reminded us of the fact—which this Whitsun period will emphasize in our hearts—that apart from a religious basis the duties such as he and the nursing profession carried out had no meaning. To care for the sick and suffering was such a natural and commonplace thing, but nursing must have a Christian function if it was to fulfil its ends, and he appealed to us to renew that basis. He pointed out to us that we had suffered in the last century from a secularism which had resulted in young children growing up in a pagan atmosphere, non-existent in this country for over five hundred years. The child of to-day often did not know the religion in which his father had been brought up, and people asked why we should not build up a society without God. They asked whether we should not be taking gifts to our brothers instead of saying prayers to God. But, who were our brothers if we were not of one family under His Fatherhood?

Whether we liked it or not we lived in God's family. We might not like the people we came in contact with—we did not have to like them, we had to love them, for, for them, Christ died, they were members of God's family. Ultimately our work was worth while when we saw in every patient something of Christ, something of God, and in the love of God it became worth doing and effective for good.

Everyone to-day had in mind their list of reconstruction conferences to be attended and had their particular blue prints bulging out of their pockets. What he wanted for his children was that they should have enough to eat, time to say their prayers, and nothing to be afraid of. The nation's immediate aim should be the re-establishment of integrity in every aspect of life, for to-day sin was in the ascendant.

Yet, he reminded us, sin was only the second strongest thing in the universe. Grace alone was stronger. The Christian way of overcoming sin was to concentrate on goodness. If we filled our lives with good then there was no time to do ill. Happiness was the by-product of doing good. If you did the will of God, happiness came and sat on your shoulder.

Jesus came into the world to overcome evil with good. If you wished to build the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth you had but to fill your life with good; he could think of no better way in which you could fill your life with doing good than by binding up wounds and relieving pain. In the spirit of Jesus Christ—the hand stretched out to cure and the healing of his seamless robe—nursing became powerful and could do its work in the only way it should.

Can we recover, if we have lost it, or deepen, if that is all that is necessary, the Christian attitude towards our patients, our work and our colleagues, as he suggested at this Whitsuntide?

Relief Coming

The Annual Meetings and Conferences this year had many high lights. Most encouraging to the nursing world was, perhaps, the statement by Mr. Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labour and National Service, that he hoped to make an announcement in the House shortly concerning domestic staff for hospitals. Does this mean that a national salary scale is to be set up and workers are to be directed into this form of national war-time service—the policy recommended by the Royal College of Nursing ? We can only wait hopefully and see. He also told us that 400,000 persons had registered as nurses on April 10—375,000 women and 25,000 men. Of these 100,000 were not nursing (see page 478). Since only 12,000 are said to be needed for the nursing services, it ought to be possible to man the services fully in the near future, and not keep beds for tuberculosis patients empty for lack of staff—the problem discussed in the conference the following night with Miss Horsbrugh in the chair. This will be reported next week.

Tragedy with an Appeal

Meanwhile we would draw all nurses attention to the facts stressed by Mr. T. Holmes Sellors and Dr. Houghton in discussing the tuberculosis problem concerning infectivity. Both stressed the fact that infection was commoner among the staff of general hospitals than sanatoria. Miss A. M. Rose and Miss F. Goodall probably put their fingers on the reason when they talked of the wards full of chronic and advanced patients with hacking coughs and night sweats, which the nurse might meet in the general hospital, and which gave her a wrong idea of the outlook and nature of sanatorium nursing. We could not but feel that if the student nurses could be made to realize that the majority of these patients would never have come there, had there been nurses to care for them in the early stages in the sanatoria, it would bring in all the nurses that we need—and more.

Growth and Progress

The Branches Standing Committee and the Council had a valuable discussion on the future of the Royal College of Nursing, on Friday afternoon. On every side it became apparent that the recent rapid growth of membership was making itself felt in a desire for further activities in every part of the country. The President agreed to ask the Council to set up a special sub-committee to consider further development of the area organization scheme, increased educational facilities in the provinces and the question of regional representation on the College Council.

American Nurse Recruitment

The American nurse recruitment campaign has been definitely successful in increasing the entrants to training schools in the States. On January 1, 1943, 100,486 student nurses were enrolled in the 1,304 state accredited schools of nursing. This is a record figure, and exceeds the number of the previous year by 9,029, and is a doubling of the former increase. Unfortunately these statistics are not available in the British Isles as student nurses, unlike pupil midwives, do not have to be enrolled by the State, though the General Nursing Council are anxious to alter the position. Recruitment of new student nurses to the American nursing schools reached 49,169—89 per cent. of the figure, 55,000, at which the government's nursing sub-committee arrived. We congratulate American nursing.

Recruitment Publicity

Nurses will be glad to see that the Ministry of Labour's recruitment campaign has spread from the papers to the hoardings. The advertisements in the press have been quite attractive, though we must confess we prefer the new one for midwifery to the earlier nursing ones—there is something more human and less cold and aesthetic about it, in spite of the nurse's mask. On the other hand, both in the advertisements and in the leaflets, there is rather a heavy emphasis on what the nurse or midwife will get, than an appeal or inspiration. Are our young people, in fact, so commercialized, and will the type of individual who will be attracted by the catalogues of advantages be of the kind to make satisfactory nurses ? We hear that many enquiries are resulting already. May they bear fruit !

What's in a Name

To stimulate interest in domestic work in hospitals, the Department of Health for Scotland is appealing for ' hospital helpers ' and has issued a special badge, bearing the letters H.H. Emergency Hospital Scheme, surmounted with the royal crown ; this badge will be worn instead of the Ministry of Health badge which is available for those working in a similar capacity in England. Hours for domestic workers in Scotland amount to 96 a fortnight, with the equivalent of a day off each week. Part time workers are to be encouraged, especially those who can work half of Saturday or the whole of Sunday, and those who can work for a few hours in the evening can also be sure of finding employment ; nor is there any bar to the hospital helpers living out, if they prefer to do so. Mr. Ernest Bevin, has given every support to the recruitment drive. The name ' hospital helper ' has a certain glamour if compared with domestic worker. It will be interesting to see which side of the Border solves its domestic problems first.

Conversion to Immunization

Sir Wilson Jameson, chief medical officer of the Ministry of Health, said recently that the infant mortality figures for the first quarter of this year were the lowest on record. He congratulated the local authorities, doctors and nurses on succeeding in immunizing half the child population against diphtheria. Last year's record of 1,826 deaths from diphtheria was 1,000 below and the number of infections 13,000 below the averages of the last ten years. He added that unless the health services brought the percentage of immunized children up to 75 there was grave danger of epidemics occurring in various parts of the country. The incidence on the continent was increasing ; in Germany there were 143,000 cases in 1939 and 236,000 in 1942. Those in charge of immunization propaganda during the last year will be full of knowledge as to how best to tackle the reluctant parent. May they find that the conversion of another 25 per cent. of the country is easy compared with the first 50 per cent.

Youth at Work

THE Government has published in 'Youth Registration in 1942' (Cmd. 6446, Stationary Office, 6d.), a survey of the registration of boys and girls and some proposals for regulating their employment, such as the need for shortening their hours, and for encouraging a wise use of canteens. The White Paper points out that 25 to 30 per cent. of young people who attended follow-up interviews could not reasonably be advised to undertake fresh activities in the form of youth organizations because of their long or inconvenient hours of work, often added to by heavy domestic responsibilities, which left little time for leisure. It is interesting to note that in Coventry, out of 906 boys and 1,006 girls who after registration joined some activity, 20 boys and 96 girls chose to join the St. John Ambulance and British Red Cross Cadets. This sounds little, but they are only two out of 23 activities open to them. All industrial nurses would do well to acquire this publication which contains regulations at present controlling the employment of young people and is also, in parts, light and amusing reading.

Speeding Production

We offer special congratulations to the members of all the units of the Student Nurses' Association who contributed to the Air Ambulance Fund last week; they sent to the Royal College of Nursing nearly £1,000. Their splendid work has brought the total for the fund well over half way to the amount necessary for an air ambulance. The next £2,000 will probably not arrive so fast but members of the Association might well take a leaf out of the book of factory workers and keep speeding up production. If they can keep the money going only half as fast as they have during the last week the ambulance will soon be ready to bring healing and health to the battle fronts. The Annual Meeting of the Association was punctuated with stop press news of fresh cheques coming in; the Royal Infirmary, Liverpool sent the largest amount yet from any single unit—£234 10s.; Walton Hospital, Liverpool sent £122, and the West Bromwich and District Hospital, a hospital which has only 140 beds in peace, and 200 in war, sent £200; for the complete list see p. 486.

BIRTHDAY HONOURS LIST: many British and Canadian Nurses honoured

We offer congratulations to the many members of the nursing profession, both British and Canadian, who received Birthday Honours this year. We would also congratulate Sir John Fraser, Professor of Clinical Surgery of Edinburgh University and honorary surgeon to the King, who receives a baronetcy, Mr. H. L. Eason, president of the General Medical Council, who was created Knight Bachelor and Mr. G. H. Ince, C.B., Deputy Secretary and Director General of Man-Power, Ministry of Labour and National Service, who receives the K.B.E. The honoured nurses are as follows:—

IN HONOUR OF LORD RUSHCLIFFE

At the Dorchester Luncheon

Left: Miss E. Dalby, sister of the London Hospital and Miss B. J. Griffiths, student nurse of Guy's Hospital, present Lord Rushcliffe with a copy of the 'History of Nursing' by Miss Agnes Pavey

'A happy family party' met at the Dorchester Hotel on Thursday, June 3, to honour Lord Rushcliffe, who had in the last year made nursing history. So Miss E. E. P. MacManus, President of the Royal College of Nursing, put it, as she rose to explain the purpose of the gathering. There were representatives from almost every branch of the College present at this friendly gathering. Miss MacManus said that Lord Rushcliffe had said to her privately that he had actually himself done very little, but she pointed out that the boat race was won by the cox not by the crew, and that if he went overboard there was no race. She, therefore, offered to Lord Rushcliffe the heartiest thanks of the members of the Royal College of Nursing.

A Greeting to All

'Everywhere there is talk of reconstruction', said Miss MacManus, 'we are working for all classes of our profession for the benefit of the person without whom our work would not exist—the patient.', She concluded with the greeting of the Irish countryside of her childhood, 'God save all here, God bless the work'.

The toast to the Royal College of Nursing was proposed by Dr. Fenton; he said how pleased he was to do this as he had been a friend of the Royal College and Miss MacManus, its president, for many years, more than he cared to mention, for his position reminded him of the story of a woman in the witness box who said she was thirty-five years of age. 'But' said the council, 'aren't you the woman I examined fifteen years ago in the case of X & X? You gave thirty-five as your age then!' 'Yes' came the reply, But I'm not the sort of woman who says one thing to-day, and another to-morrow.'

Doctor or Nurse

Dr. Fenton congratulated Miss MacManus on the way in which she had grown, year by year, in administrative stature and in feminine charm, and the College on the work it had done to secure increased salaries. While he was glad women had obtained equality in war compensation, he suggested that there should be no question of sex equality. Each sex had its own spheres in which it excelled. In the same way between doctors and nurses there was no question of equal rights, and he admired the approach of the Royal College of Nursing; but there was co-operation and no problem of the one 'throwing a spanner into the other's works'. He congratulated Miss F. G. Goodall, the General Secretary, and her team of workers, on the fact that the membership now stood at over 33,000.

Miss G. V. Hillyers, O.B.E. replied for the College, saying what a great opportunity this was for the College to thank all its friends and helpers and show them its appreciation. The College had given all nurses a channel through which they could develop in their own particular sphere of work. The war had made us all value fellowship and the College had developed this sense which was nothing but good neighbourliness. Through the College we formed contacts with others both within our profession and with those which were closely associated with it. Progress in nursing matters recently had left us almost breathless, but throughout the work that had been done, the College had made wonderful links with other professions, and had maintained happy relationships with various Ministries and the Nuffield Trust.

There had, too, been greater co-operation between schools and colleges, and many educational leaders had realized that nursing needed girls with the right educational background; that nursing had its ethical principles and could now offer satisfactory prospects. The College was to the nursing world what the matron's office was to the hospital, the centre to which everyone came with their problems and enquiries. The officials were always most helpful, so that members never went in vain. It showed a nursing profession still imbued with the spirit handed down by Florence Nightingale.

Our Guests

Miss F. Hughes proposed the health of the guests, Lord Rushcliffe, who had handled the Nurses Salaries Committee so wisely, Miss Horsbrugh, who, since the outbreak of war, had shown herself a friend to nurses and to the College, Lord Horder, the chairman of the College Reconstruction Committee, whose name, with Lord Rushcliffe's would go down in nursing history, Alderman Hyde and Mrs. Montague Norman, representatives of the Nuffield Trust, Lord Auckland, Mr. Mitchelhill, the College's fairy god-mother, who had done so much for nursing education and nursing libraries, and many others.

Lord Rushcliffe replied saying how honoured he was that the College had admitted him to this intimate family party of what the President had rightly called their beloved profession. This year was, perhaps, a landmark in the history of the nursing profession, but he considered it also a landmark in his life because of his association with members of the nursing profession. He reminded his audience that he had been brought very closely in contact with acts of gallantry performed in connection with the war; many of these came from the hospital and nursing world and would be an inspiration to those who came after. With regard to the Report he would say only one thing. He believed every member of both panels was inspired by one idea—to improve the financial position and the status of the nurse and to give public recognition to a great profession. He had never been associated with a similar body in which all members had tried so fairly to see the point of view of the other members. The College had helped in large measure to foster the spirit.

Alderman Hyde, of the Nuffield Hospitals Trust, also replied for the guests in a very humorous speech. For all time, said Alderman Hyde, Lord Rushcliffe's name would be associated with the history of nursing. Lord Nuffield, when he founded the Trust of which he was secretary himself, spoke of his interest in nursing and his desire that the Trust should benefit nursing whenever possible. The Trust, had, therefore, been very glad to play a part in expanding the useful work of the Nursing Recruitment Centre, established by the King Edward Hospital Fund, and in the training of industrial nurses in the provinces in co-operation with the College. Further, the Trust was interested in the development of preliminary training schools in the various regions. There were two newer developments—the establishment of schools of social medicine and the formation of a Women's Advisory Council of the Trust which would give guidance to the Trustees on matters relating to nursing welfare and medical and health services. The Trust was very pleased that Mrs. Montagu Norman had consented to serve as chairman, and Miss F. Goodall, as honorary secretary to this new council. He felt that the dynamic force of the chairman and secretary would convert the advisory function into a directional one.

The Central Regionalization Council had gained a valuable recruit in the College representative, Miss Monk.

An 'Interesting Condition'

Next, Alderman Hyde passed on and referred to the wider question of health and hospital services. He said that the Ministry of Health was in what was known as an 'interesting condition' and was about to deliver to an expectant world something in the nature of a comprehensive health service. The period of labour had, he understood, not been unattended with difficulties and in the opinion of some was likely to be unduly protracted. Others feared a premature birth. When the new child arrived there might well be some controversy

THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

— an outstanding year of achievement

MISS E. E. P. MACMANUS, O.B.E., having been re-elected President of the Royal College of Nursing, took the chair at its fifteenth Annual General Meeting in the Cowdray Hall on June 3. Miss D. S. Coode, Chairman of the Council, Miss B. Monk, Vice-Chairman, Miss A. M. Milligan, Vice-Chairman of the Scottish Board, Miss F. Goodall, General Secretary of the College, and Sir Comyns Berkeley, M.C., M.D., F.R.C.P., F.R.C.S., F.C.O.G., Honorary Treasurer, were also on the platform.

Opening the meeting, Miss MacManus said how happy she was to see such a gathering, but what was to happen in the future? She thanked the Council for re-electing her for a second term of office. The past year had been full of tremendous happenings not only concerning the nursing profession, but the whole world. There were great schemes afoot as was shown by the Beveridge Report, which affected the whole community, and the work of the Rushcliffe and Horder Committee, which had each made a first report but were still sitting. Everyone had heard such words as Stalingrad, El Alamein, Bizerta and the battles of the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. They knew the first step in the war was over and thoughts of peace and the part nurses were to play, both as citizens and in their profession, were near.

Pioneers and Pathfinders

There had been during the past year a great alteration in the outlook of nurses; they had become more aware of their relation to the community, more truly citizens. Their brothers and sisters abroad would come back to a different Britain, and Miss MacManus thought they might not like it—any more than she had liked the country she had returned to after three and a half years in a tent in France, after the last war. Here, people were slowly accustoming themselves to a different outlook, but they could, by writing letters to friends overseas, hold out the hand of reconstruction and with the help of patience, humour and understanding prepare them for the tremendous years of reconstruction which lay ahead. Last year she had asked nurses not to be dormice; this year she thought they were pioneers and path finders, and she wished them good luck in blazing the trail of reconstruction for the benefit of the profession, and of the patients it would serve in the years to come.

Miss Goodall read the list of 15 College members who had been mentioned in the Birthday Honours (see page 475) and of two men well known to nurses, Mr. H. L. Eason, President of the General Medical Council, who became a Knight Bachelor, and Mr. G. H. Ince, Director-General of Man-Power and Deputy Secretary of the Ministry of Labour, who was created a K.B.E. Miss MacManus received applause at her suggestion of sending an affectionate greeting to Sir Arthur Stanley, the first chairman, from the meeting. The minutes of the last meeting were taken as read, and Miss Goodall read the order convening the Fifteenth Ordinary Annual General Meeting.

Miss Coode then read the annual report, saying that Miss MacManus had been re-elected as President and Lord Horder made a Vice-President, and congratulating 38 College Members and eight Council members who had been decorated in the New Year Honours; also Miss M. Jones, O.B.E., A.R.R.C., who had received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from the University of Liverpool. All members regretted the death of Sir Edwin Cooper, architect of the College buildings and the beautiful Cowdray Hall.

She extended a welcome to Mrs. G. M. Hamblin, Secretary of the Public Health Section, to Miss H. Simpson, the new Tutor in the Education Department, and to Miss M. McEwan on her return to work at Headquarters, and said that the Branches were pleased once more to have a Midland Area Organizer—Miss A. E. Warren; she expressed the Council's gratitude to all voluntary workers who were so eager to help during times of stress.

Forging Ahead

As the President had said, the College was forging ahead with representation on (i) the Regionalization Council of the Nuffield Provincial Hospitals Trust on which Miss B. Monk sat; (ii) the Social and Preventive Medical Committee of the Royal College of Physicians; (iii) the Preventive Medicine Cross-Infection of Hospital Wards Sub-Committee of the Medical Research Council. The College was proud to have nine representatives on the Employees' Panel of the Rushcliffe Committee; its work had greatly extended and many members of the College had been delighted last month to hear Mr. C. A. W. Roberts, M.B.E. chairman of their Panel, who had obviously the interests of nursing at heart, speaking at Headquarters. Sir William Beveridge had received the suggestion which the College, after consultation with the Branches, had put to him, and he had incorporated much in his Report. The Horder Nursing Reconstruction Committee had produced a report on the assistant nurse, and would produce more which the Council hoped would bear as much fruit as the first report had in the Nurses Act.

There had been co-operation with other bodies on such matters as equal compensation for women, and rehabilitation of nurses injured in the war. Nearly £5,000 had been sent from friends overseas to help these nurses. (Applause.) Personal service formed a large part of College work; members received help from Headquarters and through the area organizers on professional work, terms of contract, coupons, rationing of milk, how to obtain rubber gloves, etcetera. The Nurses Appeal Committee had raised £850 9s. 5d. during the year, and sent the largest sum during one year, £800, to the Nation's Fund for Nurses. Her Majesty Queen Mary never forgot to send kind gifts for distribution at Christmas. The Branches Standing Committee's quarterly and two extraordinary meetings had been well attended, and gave general support and help to the Council in forming policy and making decisions.

The Nursing Times had shrivelled but, unlike the old days when the College had said, "Won't you take it?" nurses everywhere were crying plaintively that they could not get it at all. The Nursing Times fund which aimed at paying for a bed in the King George V Hospital, Malta, had nearly achieved sufficent money for a ward.

Not Big Enough

The Education Department was like a roaring animal straining at the leash; so many wanted lectures and there were so few seats. Though the College was not big enough there was hope for some improvement. Mr. Mitchelhill's gift, through the Halford Bequest, of £600 for physiological equipment for the science laboratory was greatly appreciated. Courses included training for health visitors, industrial courses which the Nuffield Provincial Trust had helped so that they might be held at Glasgow and other provincial towns; also nurse and midwife teacher courses, courses on dietetics and on tropical diseases, correspondence courses and, in co-operation with other bodies, coaching for the Diploma in Nursing, and courses for war-time nursery matrons. The College had disbursed £2,000 on bursaries, scholarships and grants during the year. The library had received from the Halford Bequest £1,000; it had bought 1,000 books, and hoped soon to have Government permission to move to the larger premises which were available through the same source.

All sections, Sister Tutor, Public Health, Private Nurses and the Student Nurses Association were growing in number and activity.

From the Scottish Board and from Northern Ireland came news of great progress. All, in fact, were agreed that the College was a fine instrument, and by keeping it at concert

A 'BALANCED SOCIETY'

The Rt. Hon. Ernest Bevin, M.P., speaks to the Professional Conference at the Royal College of Nursing

WITH the Cowdray Hall packed to capacity and more, Miss E. E. P. MacManus, O.B.E., President of the Royal College of Nursing, opened proceedings at the main professional conference of the Annual General Meetings.

'At this big, professional conference,' said Miss MacManus, we have the honour and pleasure to welcome the Minister of Labour, Mr. Ernest Bevin. His name is a household word in England to-day. Younger members of the College may not know his history ; but for the last twenty years he has been an outstanding figure in the Trade Union movement, and, in 1940, he joined the Government. He is one of the most powerful men in England to-day.

'Now, I am going to tell Mr. Bevin about the Royal College of Nursing. Its members are all kinds and types of nurses : matrons, those much maligned people ; district nurses, student nurses, public health nurses, midwives, nursery nurses, industrial nurses—your especial concern, Mr. Bevin. Membership of the College is now 33,000 and there are, in addition, 13,000 student nurse members ; during the month of May alone, there were 900 new applicants.

'The College is a body with two big branches; on the one side it is a great, professional association ; on the other an educational department, through which State-registered nurses are encouraged to take all kinds of educational courses and here I would tell you some news from the General Nursing Council. Prisoners of war can, as you know, take educational courses ; some elected to take nursing. Twenty forms to take Part 1 of the Preliminary State Examination went to Stalag 20A and Stalag 21D ; 12 forms were returned completed and 11 candidates passed.

A Stroke of Luck

'The College started 27 years ago in a single room. After a few days the ceiling fell down ; in this case an outstanding example of good luck, as we have gone on from strength to strength. We can, too, feel justly proud of our progress, for to-day is a great day : we entertain the Minister of Labour. What a miracle he has performed : he has the whole country at work. I am reminded, in this connection, of John Synge's play, 'Well of the Saints,' in which the blind beggar received his sight from an itinerant friar. The friar then asks him " What about a job," and the blind beggar replies : " I have never worked in my life." Few feel like that now and few escape Mr. Bevin's net.

'Mr. Bevin has led us all quietly : we were all at work before we knew it ; some of us are on types of work, which we never thought that we should undertake. If, with due respect, I may make a simile, I would compare Mr. Bevin to those bathing ladies of one's youth at Margate. You will , many of you, remember the horse-drawn vehicle and the first swimming lesson. The ladies led you in, dipped you in and you sank. Later, you found yourself swimming and how proud you were. Mr. Bevin has led us to work in the same way : we are all now fighting and working for a better, cleaner, saner world. The Ministry of Labour and the Ministry of Health go hand in hand, with their guiding principle :

'What is this life if, full of care,
We have no time to stand and stare.'

But we must, also, know how to enjoy our leisure : nurses minister to the minds of the patients as well as to their bodies. Let us all combine for the health of a better England.'

The Minister Speaks

'I am glad,' said Mr. Bevin, rising to his feet in a round of applause, 'that neither Low nor Strube is present to-night, but I like your simile. I am glad to have this opportunity of being with you to-night.

'All my life I have been striving, with 34 years as a Trade Union official, in the great struggle on behalf of my people, who gave me my chance in life, and my aim has always been a balanced society. I doubt if anyone really has much pleasure in judging life by mere contrast : the health, wealth and happiness of some could not give them real pleasure when they compared it with the poverty, misery and suffering of others. It is a great joy to work for health, a decent standard of living and opportunity for all, to enjoy these things and to share them with every other citizen; happiness is enhanced, if others enjoy that happiness, too.

'I can remember the days when society people got a kick out of 'slumming.' Society ladies spent a day among the poor and felt that they had had a good day : like the old lady at the drama, they cried right through the performance, but felt the better for it. A horrible business !

An Epic Year

'In the Government, as a whole, what we are striving for is a balanced society. No other profession can make such a contribution to this society as the nursing profession. The building up of a people's health is not incompatible with good pay and reasonable hours ; nor is it incompatible with giving the maximum amount of service to those whom you serve. The year 1943 will, in fact, be registered as an important year in the history of nursing, in keeping with its long, great and marvellous career.

In the organization which I used to represent, not, I hope, in competition with the Royal College of Nursing, I had a good deal to do with people employed in hospitals, and I can remember before the changes that took place in the London County Council hospital services, the argument always advanced against progress ; that, if the nurses were put under decent working conditions, it would be an enormous cost to the community.

To the Best Advantage

'In industry, if you have a good craftsman, you make sure that you get the best out of his craft, and that you use his professional skill to the maximum of his ability. You give him the necessary assistance to get the highest output ; and this same principle should apply to the great nursing profession. When you have highly skilled, trained nurses, it is wrong to work them long, tedious hours, to waste their time on menial tasks : that is inefficiency.

'There is a good deal of discussion on the changes and developments of the profession. Let us take first, the shorter day. The shorter day means shorter nerve strain for the nurse, which must inevitably mean a shorter stay for the patient in hospital. An over-worked staff, that has long and tedious hours, cannot but help being inefficient and the temper must be involved. If the nurse has a brighter life, shorter hours, the nerve strain of her work is bound to decrease, and her whole attitude towards the patient improved. When the cost of increased wages is considered from a practical aspect, it is not only how much is paid in wages, but the cost of how much it is to maintain the patient in hospital. Every day that reduces his time in hospital and his suffering, that returns him to employment sooner, is a saving of production cost to the community which out-weighs the cost on the other side. The question resolves itself into a balance sheet : this principle should apply to all problems.

Making History

'Firstly, the year 1943 will stand out for the work of the Rushcliffe and Taylor Committees. Whether you are satisfied with their deliberations or not, they have made the first stand for nursing on a national basis, and they have put the profession in a position which it has not hitherto enjoyed ; and these committees have given a foundation on which you can work and build: it was essential that this structure of pay and hours should be built; the nursing service and the patient will gain, in consequence. I believe, also, that the nurse should be given more time for study; for however old you are in the nursing profession, like any other profession, you are never too old to finish learning; this opportunity for learning must be provided in organized hours of duty and service.

'Secondly, the Nurses Act, dealing with the assistant nurse, was passed in April, and it was based largely on your work: I was interested to see how closely your ideas followed our concepts.

'The third important event of 1943 is the formation of the National Advisory Council. As Minister of Labour, I am going to look for very great guidance from that Council and to refer to it all kinds of problems. Every Minister, in every department in trade and industry, or in any profession, welcomes a body of this character, which will advise with unselfish and practical counsel. I am glad that Mr. M. S. McCorquodale is chairman to keep you advised of its progress. The National Advisory Council is not a war product: there will be more and more work for it to do in the post-war period, and it will be a permanent piece of machinery in the right tradition of a great profession.

No Easy Task

'My task in war-time is not an easy one. I have to hold the balance between civilian needs and those of the Forces; never does the balance need more acutely holding than in the medical and nursing professions. No one could foretell what the tasks of these professions would be under war conditions. Happily, they have been much less, under the Emergency Hospital arrangements, than we anticipated; thanks to our Navy and Air Force which have proved themselves to be not merely defensive but offensive forces. But there is still an acute shortage of nurses and doctors.

'Two approaches are necessary to this problem. The first is as affecting health itself; the second as it affects the distribution of manpower.

'We have arranged a special Appointments Branch of the Ministry of Labour. Do not expect too much from it at first but help us to make it as good as you can. I have watched its development under the wise and practical direction of Mrs. B. A. Bennett, D.N. (Leeds), and at least it has one advantage: I have given you a means of change of occupation and a mobilizing agent; in future, it will be a great non-fee-paying department for mobilization of the nursing profession.

'It is not only in the nursing profession, I repeat, that the balance has had to be kept between the civilian occupations and the Forces, but England is the only country in which this high degree of mobilization has taken place without a ripple on the political horizon. This fact is due to no magnetism of mine. People believe that our cause is just, and there has been whole-hearted support that what has been done between citizen and citizen is fair.

'The Ministry of Labour has indulged in an enormous amount of registration; over 26 million people have registered and the Ministry has interviewed privately over four million persons. We are proudest of our private interviews. Women have domestic difficulties and personal idiosyncracies; there are neighbourly affections to consider. But women went into the private rooms of the various employment offices, unburdened their troubles and then they went off to take the job that we had decided on for them. There were bound to be restrictions on engagements for occupation, but there has crept into British usage a new phrase, which I hope will live for a long time, and become part of our national fabric of life; 'Essential Works Order.' As the State develops its policy, the term 'Essential Works' will play a big part; so will the term 'Control of Engagement Order.' No man has, perhaps, made so many orders as I have, and never have so many people obliged. As far as orders are concerned, the object must be efficiency.

A Late Birth

'I would like to have seen the National Advisory Council come into being earlier in the war. Now there is an acute shortage in all directions; but we have now got together with you, and the nursing organization is functioning, with a special register for nurses, midwives and others engaged on nursing work. This register has resulted in 375,000 women and 25,000 men coming forward; 185,000 are in the hospital services, 22,000 in public health work, 11,000 in private nursing. There is, therefore, a further 100,000 available out of which we hope to find a sufficient number to return to the profession to help during the war; some of them are married, some others in industry. But I am sure they will respond if I ask them to come back. As a result of the advertising campaign, there have been 24,000 enquiries in four weeks.

'But I want nurses to undertake the difficult as well as the less difficult tasks. In mental hospitals, there is a terrible nursing problem: the country will be for ever in debt to those who volunteer to do this work. For the nursing of infectious diseases and other less attractive nursing work, those who come forward now, the country will never forget.

'Now that the interviewing has begun, we may have to use 'direction,' but my experience has been that the use of compulsion is infinitesimal; out of the 25 million people now employed, the number directed and compelled only amounts to a few thousands. Parliament decreed what the people must do, but in a free, democratic country, this decree is only tantamount to what the people wanted done.

In the Right Place

'I am more than glad of the assistance of the Royal College of Nursing to help me in my task, which may involve some distribution to the specialized services throughout the country to get the right nurses in the right places, as happened in other spheres of work. In the making of munitions, the skilled toolmaker has often had to be transferred to other works and we build up behind his skill with less qualified persons. I may have to call on you in the same way, and to apply the Control of Engagement Order to your service.

This state of affairs does not mean a static condition; that everyone must stay where they are. The help of the Trade Unions and the Royal College of Nursing will make the application of this order flexible and applicable, with no unreasonable handicap put in our way. The calling-up is a duty which I must perform, and I must, also, however unpleasant, distribute the nursing service to the most efficient purpose. You will, I know, respond to this.

'Industrial nursing is a new field of special interest to me. I have always been anxious that, in every works of a reasonable size, there should be a medical and nursing service. How much time is lost from the absence of such a service! How much absenteeism can be avoided by its presence in any great industrial enterprise. If the women employees have the opportunity of an hour's rest when they need it, and medical advice and attention on the spot, the proper care by the nurse in the factory prevents loss of work for a week or a fortnight, or even more. The treating of minor accidents on the spot saves sepsis and prevents all kinds of injuries keeping the worker away, sometimes for months.

'A medical service in the factory is profitable to industry. On the one hand, the less illness in a works, the happier the works; on the other, the quicker attention of the doctor and nurse, their knowledge of what goes on in the works, provides advice and assistance which it is impossible for the general practitioner to give, and which the patient cannot otherwise get.

'As an instance of what I mean, I will cite you an actual case. Six men died in a works, as the result of using a new process. The process had stood up to laboratory test, but something went wrong. The six different men each went to a different panel doctor, but in no instance was the pain traced back to the works. Had there been a doctor and nurse on the spot, it might have been a different story. This same principle applies over a wide field. It is very difficult for a doctor or nurse, working in hospital, to see what goes on inside a works. I look to the development of the new industrial nursing service to save an enormous amount of industrial ill-health and to help the hospitals.

'Another side of medical care, for both the doctor and the nurse in the factory, is that they can become advisers to the directors of their particular company, as to what is causing ill-health in the factory; for preventive medicine is the most valuable of all. I am indebted to the Royal College of Nursing for the facilities which they place at the disposal of industrial nurses, and I hope that their help will be a permanent feature of industrial life.

Not in Odd Jobs

'No time is more important for an industrial nursing service than at the present. Men are returning from the Forces, suffering the effects of war in one way and another. We do not want to see all these men as gate-men, or in some odd job or other. Most of them, if given proper care, will be able to take their place as full citizens. In the works, their difficulties will be intensified, if they have to go to hospital and to spend time waiting about. The problem of economic value will loom large as the war passes away, and facilities must be at the works for injured men to have their wounds dressed, so that they have the necessary help to compete, at their work, with the physically able. I believe that this contribution to the war effort now will prove a remedy to many of the post war evils.

'I cannot see yet how the war will end, but I do visualize that, with the awakened conscience of our people to equality, and with the drawing of people out of every type of home to take their place in the war effort, we shall look at life in a more balanced manner. Improvements in the service to the sick and suffering will find, under better conditions, in common with other services, a fillip in service and a joy in its possibilities and accomplishments.

DISCUSSION

Miss McAllister asked the Minister whether, as he was willing to try out new things, he would set up an experimental hospital in which the conditions for nurses were ideal; he would then be able to test whether the patients left hospital earlier or not. To this question, Mr. Bevin replied that he already had proof that, if hours were shortened, the time for patients in hospital was reduced.

Mr. Mace then rose to his feet, on behalf of the male nurse, to ask Mr. Bevin if there should not be a place in the industrial nursing service for the male nurse; for the male nurse was in the strongest position to understand the problems of the young, male adolescent and indeed the adult male in industry. Mr. Glavin as chairman of the Society of Registered Male Nurses, wanted to know whether a male nurse could be admitted as a member of the National Advisory Council and whether, under the operation of the National Service Act, highly skilled, State-registered male nurses, called up for the Royal Army Medical Corps, should not have the right to be employed as nurses, instead of any work but nursing. He was supported in his argument by Mr. W. Bragg.

Mr. Bevin replied that it was refreshing to hear men clamouring for equal rights with women. He was afraid that it would not be possible, at this juncture, to alter the composition of the National Advisory Council; on the question of the right use of the male nurse in the Medical Corps, he would, however, ask Mr. Ince to take notes and he would see if he could get the wrong use of the male nurse taken up; injustices were, however, a question for the Army Council.

Miss MacManus asked Brigadier Katharine Jones, D.B.E., to say a few words on behalf of the position of the male nurse in the Army Nursing Services. The trouble was she stated, that, when the male nurse was first called up during mobilization he was not attached to a unit; consequently there was not nursing work for him. When he went abroad, he was attached to a unit and in the front line with the troops, where no sister of Queen Alexandra's Imperial Military Nursing Service went; he was then on active nursing of the first order.

If a matron or sister knew of a male nurse cleaning boots, she took up the case, and she, personally, had conducted a recent enquiry with a deputy director to see that the male nurse was used to the best advantage.

Miss A. Gaywood enquired whether nurses directed into sanatoria would receive adequate compensation if they contracted tuberculosis while on duty, the answer being that the administration of compensation was a matter or the Ministry of Health.

The Domestic Problem

Miss Monk asked the Minister whether he could help the hospitals on the domestic side, to which he replied that, until now, he had not known that domestics were so popular. He could not, however, make a public announcement yet for, as a Minister, his first public announcement must be made in Parliament; he was, nevertheless, working on a scheme for which he hoped to get the support of the treasury as well as the Minister of Health.

Considering the future, Miss Dey wondered if the Minister, when he stated that he was looking forward to a permanent nursing organization in the National Advisory Council, meant a permanent institution or a permanent power of direction; if the latter, such a policy might, she felt, influence recruitment. Direction, Mr. Bevin reassured her, was for the war period only, though there might have to be a certain amount of direction at the end of the war period, until conditions of peace became settled. It would be a great disservice to any successor who might follow him, if he saddled him with such a war proviso.

The lack of liason between the industrial nurse and the district nurse was drawn to Mr. Bevin's attention by Miss M. Wilmshurst, who hoped that he would be able to give special attention to this weak link in the chain of service. Absenteeism was often due to family worries, in which the district nurse could help, and, in her opinion, it was wrong for the injured member of the family to go to the factory for treatment; the district nurse could look after her in her own home. For a comprehensive health service, the number of district nurses must, of course, be increased. The National Advisory Council would, Mr. Bevin felt, be able to give practical advice on this co-ordination of service. Naturally, every body wanted the best from all the nursing services, but there were war time conditions with which the nursing services must contend. Many men and women were living in billets which complicated the position, but the Government was paying this special attention.

Inadequate Staffing

Miss Winter agreed with the Minister that the nurse who is alert is the best at her job, but it was, she felt, the pace of work that mattered, rather than the hours worked; that caused the nervous strain; in other words, the proportion of nurses to the number of patients. In the Emergency Hospital Service, this proportion had been fixed at 35 to 100, but, in a busy hospital with acute cases, this figure was not adequate. She did not consider it possible to have standard hours of service, until the proportion of nurses was increased; the strain would still be there.

This problem, said Mr. Bevin, was for the Ministry of Health to decide. His Ministry was only involved so far as the distribution was concerned. His department would, however, try to see that there was adequate allotment of nurses to relieve strain as far as possible. Ultimately, there would be a proper division of staff and, as in other trades, a code would probably be drawn up. The compulsory registration of nurses had been left rather late in the war; if it had taken place earlier, so many nurses would not have drifted off, and the numbers of nurses for adequate staffing would not have been so short.

Another query was mooted by Miss Attwood: what arrangements for payment of part time workers was under consideration, and what part time service would be available? His Ministry was, replied Mr. Bevin, going on with the interviewing, which would discover what help was to be available. The problem of the part time worker concerned both the nurse and the domestic worker; also the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Labour must combine on the subject. Another gate to be opened was the Treasury. He was, however, aware of his responsibilities.

The final speaker, Miss K. F. Armstrong, said that, on behalf of a meeting of nurses she would like to express their pleasure at the advertisements in the newspapers and hoardings. All nurses felt that sufficient appeal for nurses had not previously been made; so much of the publicity that nursing had received in the newspapers had been of the wrong sort. She was particularly glad to hear that the advertisements had brought such a good response, and she hoped that the Minister would use the same technique of persuasive appeal through advertisement for direction, as he had used for recruitment.

A Sign of the Times

Proposing the vote of thanks, Dr. H. Balme, M.D., F.R.C.S., F.R.C.P., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., said that his was a pleasant task. It was a compliment to the Royal College of Nursing as well as to the nursing profession, that the Minister of Labour was here to-night. It was, too, a sign of the times that nursing was regarded as national service, and all those connected with nursing had, during the last few years, been struck with Mr. Bevin's understanding: it had been a great pleasure to hear Mr. Bevin go straight to the point. Nor had Mr. Bevin approached the problem from the labour angle but from the human one.

All doctors and nurses were keenly interested in the new relations of the nurse to industry. There would, he knew, be great developments in connection with rehabilitation, and Mr. Bevin could rest assured that both the medical and nursing professions would be ready to play their part in refitting men injured by war, once again to taste the fullness of life.

In seconding the vote of thanks, Miss McAllister, said she was, she knew, speaking for the profession, when she said it was ready to suffer direction and diversion if it brought the greatest happiness for the greatest number, and a more balanced order of society. On behalf of all nurses, she would like to express their gratitude to Mr. Bevin.

as to its paternity. Whether Sir William Beveridge would recognize it as one of the numerous progeny from the nursery of his Report, he did not know, nor could he say whether the new arrival would be so 'Browned off' as to fail to appreciate 'the importance of being Ernest'. In any case we must be prepared for far-reaching changes in the health services which would affectnursing.

The extended service, to be developed on proper lines, must fulfil two conditions: it should be so devised that the central and local authorities responsible for the administration availed themselves fully of the advice and guidance of those who have vocational experience as doctors, nurses and hospital administrators, and should ensure that the voluntary hospitals and their ancilliary services were placed in a position in which they were enabled to develop their services in full and free co-operation with the central and local authorities. Granted these fundamental conditions, a comprehensive health service should have the most beneficial effects as far as the health of the community was concerned. The College might well congratulate itself on the increasing recognition of nursing in the health services. It was largely due to the activities of the College that the public was generally more aware of the value of an efficient nursing service. The College had adopted a commendably far-sighted attitude toward the problems which it had to deal with, and the guests to-day desired to record their appreciation of the energetic leadership of the great and beneficient service which the College was doing so much to develop.

Alderman Hyde sat down in a round of applause and the happy family party came to an end. K.F.A.

Miss E. Barcham proposed a vote of thanks to the President, Chairman, Vice-Chairman and Members of the Council, saying she was overwhelmed with the report, and Miss M. E. Craven seconded the motion, saying that she was amazed at the energy of people who were already busy in guiding the College into such conspicuous success.

pitch much was being done for nursing.

Sir Comyns Berkeley, in presenting the financial report, said that the College was justifying its existence by carrying on the objects for which it was founded and remaining financially secure; it had a surplus of £4,482 41s. 4d, in spite of some of its members not paying their subscriptions. The Education Department had a 90 per cent. success in pupils' examinations. There was one thing he would like for the College, and that was permission from the King and the Duke of Norfolk to have a coat of arms. The College of Heralds charged £81 10s.—19,560 pence—and if half the members of the College paid one penny each, he would pay the difference. Those present received this with acclamation, Miss Cox Davies, C.B.E., R.R.C., thought the limit might not be only one penny, and before the meetings were over £25 had been collected.

The adoption of the reports was proposed and seconded, and the auditors reappointed.

Miss Goodall then read, amidst applause, the results of the Council election:—Miss M. Wilmshurst (4,177); Dr. H. Balme, O.B.E., M.D., F.R.C.S., D.P.H. (3,570); Miss D. S. Coode, O.B.E. (3,490); Miss E. C. Pearce

SECTION MEETINGS

Private Nurses' Section

MISS M. Wenden, chairman of the Section took the chair at the Annual General Meeting of the Private Nurses' Section of the Royal College of Nursing and was supported on the platform by Miss E. E. P. MacManus, O.B.E., President of the College.

Miss MacManus opened proceedings by congratulating the Section on the size of the meeting, the work private nurses were doing during difficult times, on having had their first refresher course and being able to secure bursaries for it. In reviewing the work of the Section she thought they could say to themselves, 'Well done'.

Refresher Courses

Miss Wenden read the year's report, saying that although Private Nurses' Groups were still few, membership of the Section had crept up to over 800 in spite of the continued withdrawal of nurses from this type of work. Important items during the year had been an open meeting in Birmingham and a refresher course held at Headquarters in the autumn. Should members like a repetition this autumn they should send a list of subjects in which they wanted refreshing to the Education Department. There was still a balance from the bursaries which would be available but, unless sufficient nurses could come, the work entailed would not be worth while.

On a show of hands only seven members could come themselves or knew of anyone who could come to such a course. Miss Wenden said, in reply to a question from Mr. F. Mace, that it was quite in order for an association affiliated to the College to send a member and she hoped that anyone else wishing for a course would let her know, but unless there were a sufficient number of applications there could be no course.

For Quarantine

Miss Wenden said that, after consultation between the Public Health Committee of the British Medical Association and the Central Sectional Committee, the following recommendations regarding the quarantine period to be observed by the private nurse were approved by the Council :—

"For a trained nurse who has presumably been exposed throughout her career to the common infections there should be no need for a quarantine period based on the incubation period of the disease. Therefore sufficient time to allow the nurse to have her person and her clothing and effects disinfected should be long enough, with the proviso that where there are means of ascertaining whether the carrier state exists, as in the case of diphtheria and streptococcal infections, these means should be adopted. It is considered that a minimum of 48 hours is sufficient time to carry out the necessary precautions. The co-operation or nurse should inform the doctor of the patient to whom she is proceeding that she has previously been in attendance upon, or in contact with, an infectious case. Nurses should not be sent to cases of infection unless they have had the disease or have been immunized against it."

Quarantine Fees.—During the period of quarantine the nurse should be paid full rate for board and lodging and half nursing fees, both on a daily basis and in accordance with the recommended fees and allowances.

Miss A. M. Windsor and Miss A. M. Firth proposed and seconded the adoption of the report which was passed without further comment.

The New Central Committee

For the second year in succession there was no election for the Central Sectional Committee, there being only the following four nominations to fill the vacancies caused by retiring members :—Miss B. M. Cook ; Miss M. Brown-Fowler ; Miss M. Jones ; Miss M. A. Leaning. Miss Leaning was nominated to be secretary, there were no nominations for a treasurer.

After a vote of thanks had been passed to retiring members of the committee, the assistant secretary said a few words on uniform rationing. The Board of Trade had finally granted an extension of the time allowed in which to register for the uniform concessions ; this extension ended on July 31 next. All nurses would have to decide before that date whether they wished to join the scheme, and unless they had some valid excuse, such as having been out of the country or not nursing, they would have no other chance of joining. (See Nursing Times May 23, 1942 page 343). In answer to a question as to why members of the Civil Defence Services had to give up 12 coupons instead of nine, Miss Haughton replied that they received outdoor as well as indoor uniform.

Miss Wenden told the members that she represented them on the National Advisory Council for the Recruitment and Distribution of Nurses. Private nurses were amongst those most largely called upon to serve elsewhere and she thought that almost all who could be spared had already gone. Miss Wenden said that the College would help in any difficulty with regard to being called up. She asked that any nurses working on a co-operation would let her know the difficulties resulting from calling up in their districts. She was already in contact with many in London.

The meeting then welcomed Dr. Charles Hill, M.A., M.D., D.P.H., deputy secretary, British Medical Association and Medical Planning Commission, who spoke on 'After the War.'

After the War

Dr. Hill opened his address by saying that nurses should not be unduly apprehensive as to what the Medical Planning Commission could do for the future of nurses. Their report was out-dated by the Government policy, stated in the House of Commons in February, on the Beveridge Report. The report envisaged, in Assumption A, family allowances, in Assumption C, the probability of full employment, and, in Assumption B, a comprehensive health and rehabilitation scheme, including medical, nursing, dental and ancilliary services. The ward 'comprehensive' meant comprehensive both in scope and in availability to the whole community.

The Beveridge Report was on social services not on the medical and nursing services, and Sir William had left it to the Government to investigate and to put into effect his recommendations. In the February debate the Government accepted Assumption B with two reservations : (i) that the patient be expected to pay towards expenses which might be considered as hotel costs, while in hospital, and (2) the question of appliances. The Government was thus committed to provide a national comprehensive medical and nursing service. It was worth remembering that Sir William had not invented a new doctor or nurse, a new bed or piece of clinical apparatus ; he was merely picturing his notion of an ideal health service.

Since the debate, the Government had been discussing the future of the health services with local and hospital authorities ; no great progress had been made but, as the private nurses were, in some ways, in a similar position to the private practitioners, they might find it interesting to consider the discussions.

The Government had had in mind during their discussions a service open to the whole community under the aegis of the local authorities. 'Is a service open to the whole community to the public interest?' asked Dr. Hill. Parliament was not committed on this point. The Beveridge Report was based on financial not sociological and human grounds ; in order to get contributions from the whole community, it proposed to serve the whole community. If, during the discussions, the medical profession had asked the Government to divide the community into those who wanted private practice—the 10 per cent. who were well to do—and those who wanted a national service,—the remaining 90 per cent., the Government might think that the profession was trying to preserve vested interests. This was not true. There would always be those who wanted to be ill how and where they chose ; who in all things preferred a personal deal to what they considered the cold impersonality of municipal and county machinery.

Not Acceptable

The suggestion that the profession should be contracted to be employees of local authorities was not acceptable to its members. The medical profession and the voluntary hospitals were determined on this point, and they believed that they were going to win. It was no good talking of democracy and having a delightful conception of local government ; the medical profession knew that the character of the local authorities was not such as could maintain the responsibilities of the health services.

A few weeks ago the Minister of Health altered his ideas, but previously he had proposed to group the local authorities by establishing joint boards to deal with all health matters which would control, financially and administratively, the local health services. The medical profession did not think this went far enough : the areas should be the natural hospital and health areas ; the boards should have substantial representation on them of those professions contributing to the service, particularly the medical and nursing professions. It should be remembered that the Medical Planning Commission advocated control by a corporate body ; there was apt to be mistrust of the central departmental control of a Ministry. This mistrust was founded on facts ; revolutionary as the Ministry of Health was in reorganizing the health services, it was haphazard when it came to re-arranging the government's own departments—it had planned to leave the health functions of the Ministry of Labour, the Boards of Education and Trade and the Post Office in the hands of these several bodies.

It would be a sad thing for a free profession to submit to being made a branch of the local authorities or a salaried branch of any local government.

The old Adam in man, Dr. Hill thought, made him work far better if he was paid for the amount he did than if he served in a whole time salaried scheme and, therefore, to make doctors whole-time, salaried servants was not in the best interests of those the medical profession served. It was not a good system, although it occurred amongst health visitors, in which two people, one popular but less efficient, the other unpopular but more efficent received the same emoluments. Dr. Hill still believed in the free choice of doctor and patient; if there was to be a tidy administration of the health services, this free choice would disappear as an obvious inconvenience. Doctors and nurses believed strongly that their relationship with their patients was a very important factor. The patient sometimes chose his doctor or nurse for sartorial qualities rather than clinical excellence ; even so, he was more competent to judge the service he received than a superior officer or a committee at the town hall.

Dr. Hill hoped that the nursing profession would soon be invited to the so called non-committal discussions with the Ministry of Health. As a result of these conversations, the Minister would issue a White Paper explaining his own tentative views. With 14,000 medical men in the services it was an unfortunate time to choose to reorganize the medical and nursing professions radically. By and large, they were not unsatisfactory ; because of gaps and difficulties, doctors were not going to be hurried into being made a central or local government service.

To hazard a guess as to the contents of the Minister of Health's White Paper would be impossible. At present the medical profession was more planned against than planning. The medical profession was succeeding in making the Minister withdraw to some extent from his propositions of local government control, but one could not foretell what method of service was likely, or what safeguards there would be for the private practitioner. If the bulk of doctors were recruited to a whole time scheme, those left outside the service would form an unfortunate cleft in the service. Just as doctors were anxious to get the public to seek medical advice wisely and not to go to quacks so, if this plan existed, the one service might work to the detriment of the other.

A Lead to the Public

'I do not think as private nurses you have a great deal to worry about', continued Dr. Hill 'I believe there will always be a certain section of the community who want to do things in their own way in this country'. 'It will be necessary for doctors and nurses,' Dr. Hill concluded, 'to make it clear to the public what, in our opinion, the medical service should be, so that a public does not arise with ill-informed ideas of a health service which cannot be fulfilled'.

Points considered during the discussion which followed were : (i) that hospitals might undertake the work of co-operations ; (2) that co-operations should take an initial but not a regular commission from the nurses' salary ; (3) that private nurses should try to get prospective private nurses to join the better co-operations ; this could be done by asking the matrons of training schools if they would like a member of the College to speak on private nursing ; (4) that a health service run by the State would be a detriment to recruitment of medical men both in number and calibre ; (5) that socialism was only worked out fully in Russia and even there three quarters of the workers were on piece-time and bonus rates ; (6) that as the vast majority of patients did not suffer from special diseases but from frustrations arising from bad housing, difficult work and nagging wives, they needed the personal qualities of the private practitioner and the free choice of doctor and nurse rather than what might deteriorate to be the mediocre work of a stereotyped servant of the State.

Public Health Section

THE twentieth annual general meeting of the Public Health Section, took place at the Royal College of Nursing on June 2, with Miss I. H. Charley in the chair. Proceedings opened with Miss Charley calling on the President of the College, Miss E. E. P. MacManus, O.B.E., to say a few words of welcome.

Twenty years, was, said Miss MacManus, a long time to look back, yet to some of the older members of the Section, the time would have gone in a flash because of the achievements that the Public Health Section had secured ; the latest, if not the greatest of these, the development of the industrial nursing service. She had always believed that the International Council of Nurses had done more to bring about understanding with other nations than the League of Nations, and the getting together of so many nurses for the International Course at Bedford College brought all kinds of people from the leading countries to England. The same principle was at work in the industrial nursing service. The industrial nurse was making all sorts of contacts ; these contacts would have a far reaching effect on political and social conditions in the many strata of society with which she came in touch. There was, she felt, in the Public Health Section, the chance to work for the nation as a whole.

Election Results

The minutes of the last meeting duly confirmed, Miss Charley announced the results of the postal ballots : on the Central Sectional Committee, Mrs. A. A. Woodman, Miss I. H. Charley, Miss J. M. Calder and Miss A. Brown had been re-elected ; on the Scottish Public Health Regional Committee, the following had been elected :—Miss C. Sinclair, Miss I. Hamilton, Miss C. McN. Keachie, Miss E. Liston, Miss I. M. Barclay, Miss E. K. Cockburn, Miss M. R. Davidson, Miss J. B. Hurry and Miss R. Campbell.

The Year's Work

In presenting the annual report, the chairman stated that there was an ever increasing membership ; the total number was now 2,566 and the number of public health sections within the branches 42 ; the total number of new members during the year 446. Quarterly meetings had been held at Leeds, Bristol, Darlington and Nottingham.

During the past year, the Section had passed several important resolutions. First among these was the resolution that a more comprehensive training was necessary for the nurse, and that general training should include maternity nursing as outlined in the syllabus for the first part of the examination of the Central Midwives Board and the introduction to the principles and practice of public health nursing. The second resolution was that the payment of overtime on an hourly basis was unprofessional and unacceptable ; an adequate basic salary should be paid to cover any extra time required to be worked.

The third was that tuberculosis visitors and clinic nurses should hold the Health Visitor's Certificate ; this resolution had been forwarded to the Ministry of Health.

The Section congratulated Miss Clare Sykes on her appointment as First Nursing Officer to the Ministry of Supply and also on her election to the Industrial Health Advisory Committee.

In Special Fields

As a Section, public health nurses owed perhaps their biggest debt of gratitude to the sub-committees, who were guarding their interests in specialized fields. The health visitors' and school nurses' sub-committee, under the chairman, Miss F. E. Frederick, had done valuable work in the part played by the nurse in the care of tuberculosis and venereal disease, and on the place of the assistant nurse in the public health services. They had also made representation to the London County Council that the school nurses in the Council's employ should hold the Health Visitor's Certificate, so that they should be in the position to instruct the mother.

The midwives' and district nurses' sub-committee chairman, Miss I. Lee, drew up a memorandum on housing as seen by the district nurse, which the Section had sent to the Ministry of Health ; and this committee had also, passed the resolution that ' it was detrimental to, divorce the nursing and midwifery professions.' The industrial nurses' sub-committee had worked out many professional problems, and it was in close touch with the Ministry of Labour ; it had done much to interpret many of the official rulings with which the industrial nurse was in contact, such as the Essential Works Order. In the industrial field the findings of the committee had helped to establish a professional scale of salaries. Miss Carter would speak later on the special committee on public health nursing training.

The Section had received many bursaries on the educational side, including 50 guineas (for seven years) from the Metal Box Company and the same sum from Gillette Industries Ltd. and Kodak Ltd. It was, in effect, a satisfactory year of progress and she had pleasure in proposing the adoption of the report.

Inadequate Time Allowed

In seconding the adoption of the report, Miss Frederick said that she had been asked to give a few details of the special committee on which she was serving : the Joint Consultative Committee, now the Joint Consultative Council. This Council was composed of representatives of all the training bodies of health visitors, the Public Health Section and the Women Public Health Officers Association. It was conducting enquiries into the supply and demand for health visitors, but had not yet come to any decision. The Council had sent a questionnaire to health visitors and, judging by the replies, it would seem that there was, in general, inadequate time allowed for home visiting. The home visit, was, too, interpreted in a different way by different local authorities ; it might constitute talking to the mother if the health visitor met her in the butcher's shop, a talk at the gate or only a visit in the home. Some authorities called a visit to the mother and baby two visits, some one.

She also served on the Central Council for Health Education which had considerably extended its work and would do more and more. The Council now published a quarterly booklet, ' Health Education,' price 1s. 6d., which those interested in health education would find useful reading. It had, too, organized a summer school of health education to take place at Chelsea Polytechnic in August. Another special committee of the National Council of Women was concerned with suggestions for child health. As representative of the Section, she had supported the view that there should be a Ministry of Childhood.

The Scottish Report

The Interim Public Health Regional Committee had held four meetings during the year 1942, at which the secretary of the Scottish Board, Miss F. Udell, O.B.E., had been present.

The first problem to tackle had been the revision of the Health Visitors' Training Courses and the committee's proposals, sent to the Royal Sanitary Association of Scotland, at the end of 1941, had been discussed between representatives of that Association and the Scottish National Health Visitor's Association. As a result, the committee's suggestions had been put forward to the organizers of the Edinburgh and Glasgow training courses. In Glasgow, revisions had been made in the training syllabus, as far as war conditions permitted, but in Edinburgh no progress had been made.

Considerable discussion had taken place on the teaching of mothercraft and hygiene in schools, and the opinions of the Edinburgh and Glasgow sections obtained. The committee had agreed, that a State-registered nurse, holding the Health Visitors' Certificate and an additional teaching qualification and who had practical experience in health work, was the most suitable person for such teaching. At a future date, the committee hoped to arrange a joint conference with the Educational Institute of Scotland on this subject.

Another important piece of work, accomplished by the committee, had been the compilation of a draft constitution for the constitution of the Public Health Section Scottish Regional Committee; this had been approved by the Scottish Board and the Central Sectional Committee of the Public Health Section and in its final form, passed by the annual general meeting of the Section held in London; it had also received the approval of the Council of the Royal College of Nursing. The first Public Health Regional Committee had been elected under this constitution in 1943.

Mrs. Keir Watson represented the committee on the Scottish Board and Miss Keachie on the Reconstruction Committee of the Scottish Board. Miss Brown moved the adoption of the Scottish report and Miss Udell, in seconding its adoption, said that she would like to take this opportunity, as one who had worked with the Interim Committee, of stating how well its members had worked.

The next item on the agenda was the passing of the accounts, and a few words on the financial structure of the Section by Miss Barrett, treasurer of the College. Not all secretaries and treasurers of the public health sections within the branches were, she thought, aware that they could apply for a two shillings capitation grant per section member for every life or founder member within the specific branch; this was an aid to local branch expenses.

Special Resolutions

Two important resolutions had been referred back by the Central Sectional Committee for the annual meeting to discuss. The first was that: 'The Public Health Section considers that the time is now opportune for the development of group conferences throughout the country to represent specialist interests within the Public Health Section: (a) health visitors, tuberculosis visitors, school nurses, mothercraft teachers and others; (b) superintendent health visitors, inspectors of midwives, superintendent school nurses, supervising matrons of nurseries; (c) district nurses; (d) practising midwives; (e) industrial nurses; (f) State-registered nurses in children's nurseries: such conferences to be called in the areas as laid down in the area organization scheme of the College, at the discretion of the chairman of the Public Health Section and/or on the written request of four members, stating the object of the conference. Each conference to be called by written notice from the secretary to the Public Health Section and to elect its own chairman. Recommendations from group conferences to be sent to the Central Sectional Committee and also to the sectional committees within the branches. Should action be required the Central Sectional Committee to refer the recommendations to the next quarterly meeting of section members.'

Miss Sykes opened the discussion and said that she was particularly interested in the resolution, and the conception of public health nurses as a health team. They were concerned with different aspects of health, but each must take the family as the basic unit from which to work. Each section of public health needed the constant interchange of specialized knowledge and continuity of experience; each group had its own problems. Sometimes these would need discussing in an individual group, sometimes in consultation with one or more groups; any group, for instance, discussing the health of the working mother would need the views of various groups or, if a group was concerned with tuberculosis, then the experience of nurses working on tuberculosis cases would be valuable to it. She would, too, like to put in a plea that the groups should operate on an easy method with simplicity of procedure.

Miss L. E. Montgomery, Northern Area Organizer, stated that, in her area, she had met with the desire for such groups, particularly among the district nurses and her experience was corroborated by the other area organizers: Miss W. D. Christie (Eastern), Miss Adams (Western) and Miss Warren (Midland).

Value of Group Activities

As Headquarters secretary, Mrs. Hamblin also supported the need for these groups, for the Section and the College were, she felt, inclined to lose members by not catering for specialist interests. Complaints reached Headquarters of the inequality of conditions for nurses who worked under local governments; if nurses working under bad conditions met those working under good conditions, it re-fired their enthusiasm and sometimes set them off again to see what could be done for improvement. Miss Udell felt, too, that the resolution was sound in that the group opinions would prove valuable for general administration.

Miss Christie, although she appreciated the need for group activity, said she would like to put before the meeting that section members were also branch members; conflagrations of meetings might arise and the work of the branches be interrupted by the sections. Miss A. Fox said that she had opposed this last year, but she now felt that all group activity gave added interest in the branch.

The second resolution before the meeting was that: 'the Central Sectional Committee may appoint sub-committees, each sub-committee shall consist of three members of the Central Sectional Committee.; three members to be appointed by the Central Sectional Committee; and three members to be co-opted by the sub-committee. The honorary officers are members ex officio—an amendment to the constitution.

Introducing the motion, Mrs. Woodman stated that the existing constitution of the sub-committee was hampering the work, that the Section was endeavouring to do; members were often not able to turn up and so a quorum was not obtainable, Mrs. Hamblin corroborated her statement and also made clear that the new sub-committees particularly wanted representatives from the provinces. Miss M. McEwan queried whether the six members were to be members of the Public Health Section, to which Miss Charley replied that the three members appointed by the Central Sectional Committee would be so, but that the three co-opted members did not need to be members of the College, if they had specialized knowledge. This was carried.

Training the Public Health Nurse

From the Public Health Training Sub-Committee, the chairman, Miss G. B. Carter, spoke on the need for revision on the training of the public health nurse. Many people were feeling, she said, that the whole field of public health was getting so immense, that it was not enough to take the nurse with general training and a comparatively short specialized training (the six months' health visitor's course, for instance) plus the midwifery certificate. There was also a tendency to whittle down training and sometimes the public health nurse was not a midwife. The question at stake was, whether three years devoted to hospital nursing was the best preliminary for public health work.

Many people who came in contact with young women found that they were wanting to take up public health work, but that they were daunted by the idea of hospital training. The young in the schools were beginning to have some idea in their minds of what Florence Nightingale had in hers in 1860. The mass of ill-health was so great, that a great wave was sweeping over the country for the acquisition of good health: it was a tremendous thing. Many girls from the Services would join the public health services if they had not to spend three to four years in hospital first.

Her committee was working for a greater idea of preventive medicine and this country might do as the University of Toronto had initiated, and institute a course of training of three years and three months, for those who intended to take up public health nursing; this period covered hospital training and the Health Visitor's Certificate. It must, however, be born in mind that there were no midwives in Canada, only maternity nurses. On this basis, the potential public health nurse would be able to study the practice and teaching of public health nursing all the way through. In Toronto, of course, the students taking this special university course in the general hospital did not carry the load of the hospital but were students. The Chair of Social Medicine at Oxford had, she felt, set a standard and opened the way for the possibility of a similar course for health visitors in this country. In the near future, she hoped to meet Sir Wilson Jameson to find out the reactions of the Ministry of Health to such a training and also those of the General Nursing Council.

During the discussion a speaker queried whether the girl in training was sure which branch of nursing she eventually wished, and Miss Warren said that, in the Midlands, she had found that the student nurses were eagerly finding out about different types of work.

Miss I. G. Horsman felt that there was the economic side to be considered. To take the Health Visitor's Certificate, a girl must pay for the course and keep herself while she was in training. Would it be possible to get financial aid during a special scheme of training. In reply, Miss Carter stated that there would, she felt, be a percentage of girls who would be able to pay for training, but that public health was of such importance to the country that financial support should be forthcoming; there was, for instance, the Oxford Chair, and large municipal authorities might offer bursaries. The Ministry of Health also made grants.

One Way Traffic

Miss M. M. West felt that, at the moment, such a training scheme was a one-way traffic; one must work also for the good of the hospitals and should not public health nurses go back into hospital, at intervals, if the hospitals were to be training schools for public health nurses? Miss A. E. Merry said that, in America, the training was fluid and that public health nurses did go back into hospital; some public health training was included in general training as far back as 1928.

Miss Udell said that she originally took up nursing with the idea of doing public health work. She did not like two different ways of training the public health nurse. All nurses should have a basic training including some public health training. The whole question should, she thought, be discussed carefully all over the country.

The meeting concluded with an omnibus vote of thanks by Miss K. M. Roe to all those who had born the burden and heat of the day: the Central Sectional Committee; the sub-committees; the College treasurer, Miss Barrett; the area organizers; the headquarters staff, with particular thanks to Mrs. Hamblin and the members of her staff who had done so much of the clerical work. The vote of thanks was seconded by Miss Westwater and Mrs. Woodman replied for all concerned.

In Memory of Miss Nightingale

A Florence Nightingale memorial service for nurses was held in the Chapel of the General Hospital, Birmingham on May 23. Although the service was on a smaller scale, owing to transport difficulties, nurses from ten hospitals attended. The Venerable Archdeacon McGowan gave an inspiring address taking as his text 'Am I my brother's keeper?'

Answers to the State Examination Questions

GENERAL NURSING

QUESTION 2.—Give a full account of the immediate post-operative nursing and the after-care of a patient who has had tonsils and adenoids removed.

An operation bed would be prepared for the patient in the usual way. A small mackintosh, covered with a towel, would be placed over the head of the mattress. On the locker would be a bowl of swabs in cold or iced water, a receiver, a gag, tongue forceps, sponge holder and sponges and a pulse chart.

The patient is lifted on to the warmed bed and put in the semi-prone position, the right arm being drawn behind the back, with the left knee more flexed than the right one. A pillow may be put under the abdomen. In this position any blood will run out of the mouth instead of being inhaled into the respiratory tract. The patient is covered with a warm blanket and other bed clothes.

The pulse is taken quarter-hourly until it is at a steady level and the patient conscious.

The nurse will wipe the blood from the face or mouth as necessary, and collect any vomit. She will watch for signs of swallowing, which may indicate bleeding. If the patient becomes cyanosed or breathing is impeded, the nurse should immediately inform the surgeon or anaesthetist. Pending his arrival, the nurse pulls the patient's lower jaw forward. If this does not restore breathing the tongue depressor is introduced, the gag inserted and the tongue pulled forward. If this is not successful the nurse will carefully swab out the back of the throat to clear the air-way of blood. If necessary, the foot of the bed may be raised on high blocks in case blood or secretions have run into the larynx.

As soon as the patient is conscious he will be given a pillow, made comfortable and encouraged to sleep. The patient will be given frequent mouth washes, special attention being paid to the teeth.

Fluids, soft foods, such as jelly, custard and ice cream are given. Swallowing prevents stiffness of the muscles of the throat and so avoids pain. If the patient complains of ear-ache the application of warm wool will help to relieve it. He may be ordered aspirin, grs. x, or a similar narcotic. A gargle containing aspirin may be prescribed.

On the evening following the operation, an aperient is usually given to assist in ridding the bowel of blood which may have been swallowed.

Reactionary haemorrhage is unusual, but should it occur, the nurse would send for the surgeon. Pending his arrival, the nurse would sit the patient upright. With the aid of a tongue depressor and an electric torch, she would see which side was bleeding. A covered swab securely attached to a sponge holder would be dipped in adrenalin and pressed on to the tonsil bed. Counter-pressure is applied at the side of the neck. The patient may have to return to the theatre for the pillars of the fauces to be stitched together.

Breathing exercises should be given. A tonic may be prescribed during convalescence.

QUESTION 3.—What do you understand by a narcotic poison? Name one and describe the symptoms which would be produced by swallowing it. Pending medical aid, what first-aid treatment would you give a person suffering from narcotic poisoning?

A narcotic poison is a drug prescribed to relieve pain and induce sleep. It depresses the nervous system and may also be used as a basal anaesthetic. All narcotic drugs have a certain safety margin, which is the difference between the therapeutic and the lethal dose. They are included in the Dangerous Drugs Act or the Poisons Act, and definite rules are laid down regarding the custody and administration of these drugs.

Opium is a narcotic. The symptoms of narcotic poisoning are drowsiness leading to coma. This may be preceded by a slight preliminary excitability. Pin point pupils, flushing of the skin, sweating, slow respirations, the patient breathing possibly two to three times per minute, or breathing may cease altogether. Cheyne-Stokes breathing may occur. The mouth will be dry. There may be vomiting. There may be an odour of poppy in the breath.

Pending medical aid, providing the patient is conscious, the nurse would try to make the patient vomit. She could do this by putting a spoon or spatula down the patient's throat or by giving an emetic. A suitable emetic would be salt and water, two table-spoonfuls to a pint, or mustard and water, one table-spoonful to a pint. The vomit should be saved for inspection.

If the patient is in hospital, the nurse would prepare for a stomach lavage. The lotion prepared would be potassium permanganate, 10 grains to a pint of water.

Half a pint of strong, black coffee containing glucose should be given by mouth if the patient is conscious or by stomach tube or per rectum if the patient is unconscious.

Every endeavour should be made to prevent the patient from falling asleep. He should be walked about, flapped with a cold, wet towel, pinched and shaken. Ammonia may be held to the nose, but care must be taken that the patient does not inhale too much. If available, inhalation of oxygen, 95 per cent. $C.O._2$, 5 per cent. may be given. If respiration ceases, artificial respiration must be applied. Any bottles found from which the drug may have been taken must be saved.

State Examination Questions, April, 1943

FINAL SUPPLEMENTARY FOR MALE NURSES

All questions for this examination are the same as for the General part of the Register, with the exception of the two in Section B given below.

Venereal and Genito-Urinary Diseases and the Nursing of these Diseases.

3. Discuss the nursing care during the first week following suprapubic prostatectomy. What complications may arise during this period?

4. A case of acute gonorrhoea is admitted to a surgical ward. What steps would you take to prevent spread of infection to others?

MIDWIFERY FOR NURSES.—Douglas Miller, M.D., F.R.C.S.Ed., F.R.C.P.Ed., F.R.C.O.G. (Edward Arnold and Co., 41, Maddox St., W.1.; price 7s 6d.)

This small handbook should be useful for pupil midwives at the beginning of their training. The text is lucid and concise, and most of the illustrations are very clear. An exception is Fig. 45 in which no indication is given as to which is the head end of the photograph. The ovarian hormones and pemphigus neonatorum are two subjects not discussed which seems a serious omission, as they are matters about which examiners expect pupil midwives to know something.

Breast-feeding is given more attention than this vital subject often receives in a small text-book, but the chapter on the premature baby is disappointingly brief. The book is printed on good paper, and for a war-time production is inexpensive at 7s 6d.

VENEREAL DISEASE IN BRITAIN.—By Sydney M. Laird, B.Sc., M.D., Ch.B. F.R.F.P.S.G., D.P.H. (Penguin Books, Ltd., Harmondsworth, Middlesex; price 9d.)

This book is published that the facts related to venereal diseaes may be within the reach of all who wish to know them. It avoids troublesome medical terms and it is intended to create an overwhelming demand for Government action to control this ever growing menace to the national health. Nurses who feel rusty on the subject would do well to read these 79 pages; even if they do not agree with the demand for Government control, the style is easy, the author relying on facts rather than rhetoric to uphold his cause.

In 1918, Sweden introduced compulsory measures against venereal disease and reduced the number of cases of acquired and inherited syphilis in Stockholm from 1,970 in 1919 to 101 in 1935, i.e., to 5 per cent. of the 1919 figure. Corresponding figures for Liverpool are 2,550 in 1919, and 945 in 1935, i.e., 37 per cent. of the 1919 figure. How far, asks Major Laird (who is a member of the Venereal Diseases Sub-committee of the Central Council for Health Education), having the medical knowledge for diagnosis and treatment, are we going to let the venereal diseases lower the physical, and one might add mental, standards of the British people and lower an already low birth rate? 'Do not leave it entirely to others,' he ends, 'all must play their part in the fight against venereal disease.' Most of us, whatever we feel about compulsory treatment, will agree. The Ideal is Easy

In your editorial of May 29, you state that the ideal way of taking temperatures in a ward is for each patient to have an individual thermometer, an ideal seldom realized.

A year ago when I was appointed sister to a new medical department with 38 beds, a thermometer was supplied for each patient. The first difficulty, which was to find suitable receptacles, was overcome by using a circular rack intended to hold twenty test tubes. This had a central handle. A pledget of wool placed at the bottom of each test-tube, was soaked in a weak antiseptic solution. Each test-tube was labelled with the name of the patient.

The department has two wards, each having 19 beds. The nurse gives out to the patients on one side of each ward, i.e., to 9 or 10 patients, their individual thermometers and then takes the pulse and respiration of the patients who were the first and second to receive their thermometers. She then reads the thermometers, shakes them down and wipes them with separate pieces of moist wool before replacing them in their respective test-tubes. After this she takes the temperature, pulse and respiration of the other patients who have all had their thermometers in for at least three minutes.

When a patient is discharged his thermometer and test-tube are disinfected. The test-tube is boiled and the thermometer, after being thoroughly washed, is placed in a solution of 1-20 carbolic for 1 hour at least, usually left in overnight.

The advantages are numerous. It is well known that thermometers cannot be disinfected by placing them in antiseptic for the short time allowed when only three or four are used. Although in the past, sufferers from tuberculosis, etcetera, have been given their own thermometers, undiagnosed cases or those incubating diseases such as streptococcal sore throats may transmit germs and be a danger to others. Moreover, on many occasions a patient has objected—quite justifiably— to having a thermometer put in his mouth which immediately before was in the mouth of someone else.

Although each patient has the thermometer for at least three minutes, the nurse's time is saved. There is far less handling of each thermometer.

Anyone adopting similar methods to those I have used in the last year, would never contemplate going back to what should be considered an anachronism.

Hospital for Stalingrad

The Joint Committee for Soviet Aid is aiming to raise sufficient funds to build a new hospital at Stalingrad and we earnestly appeal for a nation-wide response to this effort. This hospital will be a permanent expression of the British people's gratitude to the defenders of Stalingrad, who by their suffering and heroism have made such a great contribution to the final victory of the United Nations.

Any contributions should be sent to the organizers at 171, St. Stephen's House, London, S.W. Signed :—

From a Council Member

Through the Nursing Times I should like to say thank you to my colleagues of the Royal College of Nursing who have done me the honour of electing me to the College Council. I should also like to say thank you for the publicity which has been so generously afforded the nominated candidates through the paper.

We live in stirring times, and I shall do my best in helping the work of the Council, bearing always in mind the great profession to which I am privileged to belong, working always towards the future which will be not less great than the traditional past, and the courageous present so ably borne by all nurses.

EVELYN PEARCE. S.R.N., R.F.N., S.C.M.,

To Northern Student Nurses

Student Nurse Walsh of Rochdale Infirmary would like to thank all who supported her during the election, and to assure them that she will do all in her power to justify their confidence in her.

As Northern Area representative for the student nurses, she will be pleased to visit hospitals in this area, at their invitation, to discuss any matter which they feel they would like brought to the notice of the Council of the College. G. G. GOODCHILD, Matron.

FOR MALTA G.C.

A Rolling Tide

Our congratulations to the Birkenhead, Wallasey and Wirral Branch which has sent us a cheque for £57, and to the other branches which have promised us such substantial sums. The Leeds pageant and exhibition has raised £200 and from Preston there is every chance of £150.

But we are, too, just as grateful to those who send the smaller amounts ; for every sixpence helps and every gift, in cash or in kind, helps to swell the total for the Nursing Times Fund for the Nurses' of Britain ward in the King George V Hospital of Malta G.C. This total, thanks to the generosity of nurses, now stands at £8,151 7s. 6d.

If there are still nurses who would like to have a share in the rebuilding of the Malta hospital, will they send their contribution to the Nursing Times Fund for the Nurses' of Britain Ward, c/o The Silver Thimble Fund, Macmillan & Co., Ltd., St. Martin's Street, W.C.2.

NURSES' APPEAL FOR NURSES

Nation's Fund for Nurses

What would we have done without our very faithful monthly donors this week? They have saved our total from almost complete extinction and we are deeply grateful. We feel, however, that there are too few monthly donors and those have been helping our Fund for years. Are there not some other hospitals which could send us a few shillings each month? It is so helpful to have a few regular donations coming in so please consider it if you can.

Ideas on Recruitment

From the Student Nurses' Rally at Leeds

By kind permission of the matron and management of the General Infirmary at Leeds, a rally for the Student Nurses' Associations of the Royal College of Nursing, in the Northern Area, was held at the Infirmary, on Thursday, May 27. One hundred and fifteen delegates attended, representing 50 training schools, coming from all quarters of the northern area. Through the kind co-operation of the Sister Tutor Group in Yorkshire, the Exhibition of Nursing was open from 10 a.m., and many nurses availed themselves of the opportunity to study the excellent diagrams and models displayed.

Everyone was, however, present at 2.30 p.m. for the Rally meeting, when Miss A. E. A. Squibbs, D.N., took the Chair and welcomed the student nurses. Apologies and greetings were announced by Miss Montgomery, and Miss Squibbs introduced Miss H. M. Burbury, member of the College Council and matron of the General Infirmary at Leeds. Miss Burbury gave a cordial welcome to all and told the nurses of her association with the Student Nurses' organisation since its beginning. She spoke of the nurses of to-day being the responsible people of the future, and of how, in this fine association, they could learn now how to uphold the tradition of nurses.

Miss Squibbs' next pleasant duty was to introduce Miss M. Capper, B.A., a student nurse at the General Infirmary at Leeds, who discussed 'How best to aid Recruitment to the Nursing Profession.'

From Outside and Inside

Firstly, said Miss Capper, they should consider why there was a shortage of nurses. There were, she felt, two reasons. Over one of them, they had no control—the great demand for women power in all spheres, but the remedy to the second lay partly in their hands—an ignorance on the part of the public of the life and work of a nurse, and a kind of bogey in some people's minds about hospital conditions. They should think, too, what had been done and what remained to do. There had been the Rushcliffe Committee on salaries and various exhibitions of nursing, and nursing had featured in broadcast talks, but there was still much undone; reforms within the profession should always be under discussion.

Wanted: First-Hand Knowledge

Was the present system of training, for instance, the best possible one as regarded training and as regarded getting work done? Could anyone speak from first hand knowledge of the effects of the shift system of work, or the block system of theoretical learning? What did the meeting think on the question of the assistant nurse, and her execution of much of the routine work, only indirectly affecting the patient? How far should supervision extend over the nurses' life away from the ward? Was it practicable or desirable for the nurse to live away from the hospital or to have self-government in the nurses' home? Was it possible to have some stability of off duty to allow nurses to have some measure of regular participation in outside activities? Continuity of outside activity could but reflect favourably upon work inside the hospital. If nurses mixed more with the outside world, they would indulge less in their favourite habit of grumbling, and the outside world would meet the nurse at first hand.

On the question of current publicity, she felt that these points should be raised for inclusion in any scheme: the qualities required of a nurse, plain statements of fact about hours, salaries and conditions; the practical value of the work, the fields open to the trained nurse. Would it be possible to have a publicity or regional committee to supply speakers or perhaps films for school girls? Could short films be made of nursing life? For immediate remedy for the shortage of nurses, she would recommend the best use of the part-time worker and of the auxiliary, and, in conclusion, she would say that recruitment would best be aided by reforms within the profession, though publicity would always help.

In the lively discussion that followed Miss M. K. Dickson, General Infirmary, Leeds, stated how there was an excellent film on the A.T.S. and suggested that there should be a really good film about nursing. She also spoke of the large stores showing exhibits in their windows for the Services, but none on nursing, and that this might be done. Miss Burbury quoted the fact that there had been a hospital film, but she felt it was not good enough; that it had been tried in some places in the South but had not been too well received.

Miss Walsh, Rochdale Infirmary, did not think that the existing film showed the nurse as she really was, maintaining that the profession was sacred and should be shown as such. She spoke, too, of how, in Rochdale, a Regional Committee had been formed and that nurses were going around to schools and clubs, talking on nursing, and interesting senior school girls and young women in nursing. Answering Miss Capper's request about the Block System of teaching, both Liverpool Royal Infirmary and Newcastle General Hospital representatives said this had been tried out before the last State examinations, and they felt that it had been advantageous.

ABOUT OURSELVES

Reunion at the Middlesex

The annual reunion of the Middlesex Hospital took place on May 22, when many generations of Middlesex nurses gathered to meet old friends or to hear news of their contemporaries. Among those present were Miss E. M. Bowdler, matron, Haile bury Emergency Hospital, Miss E. M. Thompson, matron, St. John's Hospital, S.W.11., Miss I. M. Haythornthwaite, matron, Weybridge Hospital, Miss I. S. Morse, matron, Whitley Village Hospital and Miss B. M. Haughton assistant secretary, the Royal College of Nursing. Dame Alicia Lloyd Still, Miss M. G. Montgomery and Miss L. S. Begg very much regretted that they could not be there.

The afternoon opened with a service in the chapel, a meeting of the League following, with Miss D. M. Smith, O.B.E., in the chair; special speaker was Mr. J. C. McIntyre Matheson, D.S.O., M.B., Ch.B., governor of H.M. Prison, Holloway, and his subject 'Procedure in the Courts as it affects nurses giving evidence and dealing with prisoners.'

Mr. Matheson dealt with the many complexities of the English law and the various courts at which a prisoner might appear. In foreign countries, he said civil law, was in some instances, codified; a list of various crimes drawn up and punishment administered by the judge. In England, however, this was not so: each case was tried on its merits, and the scales weighed, if at all, for the prisoner.

The part played by the sisters of the prison nursing service was an important one, for the reports they made to the medical officer of the prison were considered carefully in conjunction with his examination of the patient and might influence the court's decision; the sisters it was who saw the patient day and night, quiet and excited, mixing with the other prisoners. Two thirds of the prisoners passed through the prison hospital the onus on the service was, therefore, great. Tremendous advance had been made in the treatment of the mentally ill which would develop still further after the war; the prison nursing service would play an important part in this.

The reunion concluded with thanks by Miss Haughton and tea in the nurses' home.

St. Bartholomew's, Rochester

Miss H. Dey, O.B.E., R.R.C., matron, St. Bartholomew's Hospital, E.C.1., a member of the National Advisory Council and of the Rushcliffe Committee, spoke of some problems affecting the nursing profession when she presented prizes at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, Rochester. The Rushcliffe Committee she said hoped to recommend the introduction of a national pension scheme to facilitate movement without loss of pension rights; at present a nurse who wished to transfer from a voluntary hospital to a public authority hospital, or enter the Services lost her pension.

Miss Dey also pointed out that the Rushcliffe Committee's recommendation of a 96 hour fortnight could not come into force until there were more nurses in the country. In time, if hospitals wished to have grants in aid it would be enforced. The gigantic shortage of nurses to-day was not because nursing was unpopular; the profession was only unpopular with those who were unsuitable to be nurses. There were more registered nurses in Great Britain than ever before and the number was going up every year. The shortage was due to the fact that openings for the nurse were so much greater. With regard to the Nurses Bill, Miss Dey thought it high time that the assistant nurse was recognized and, on the other hand, that those women without qualifications of knowledge, skill or character should cease to be called nurse.

IN PARLIAMENT

In the House of Commons on May 6 Mr. Sorensen asked the President of the Board of Trade if he was aware that members of the Civil Nursing Reserve had to part with 12 coupons for uniforms annually, irrespective of whether a new replacement uniform was issued to them; and whether this practice will be discontinued so that coupons were only relinquished in actual exchange for uniforms.

Mr. Dalton said that, in agreement with the Minister of Health, he had arranged that members of the Civil Nursing Reserve might have their uniform, both the original issue and subsequent replacements, coupon-free, on condition that they refunded to his department each year an agreed proportion of their basic ration. The coupon value of the initial outfit of uniform for members of the Civil Nursing Reserve varied between 40 and 106 coupons. Those arrangements were similar to those made for most other wearers of essential civilian uniform. The purpose of the annual refund was to offset the advantage which wearers of coupon-free uniform would otherwise have over people who had to buy all their clothes out of their ration.

Sir Percy Hurd asked the Minister of Health whether steps would be taken as far as practicable to enable medical men, women and nurses serving with the fighting forces abroad to express their views in the discussions now proceeding on the future of medical and health services, especially seeing that these discussions were beyond anything contemplated before the war, and that the success of any new type of services would be impossible without their co-operation.

Mr. Brown said he contemplated publishing as soon as practicable a statement of the general nature of the Government's proposals, which would enable everybody (including men and women in the Forces) to see for themselves what was suggested.

Diet difficulties and INDIGESTION

Normally, digestive troubles can be largely alleviated by diet regulation, but under present limitations there is little scope for individual discrimination. A safe, time-proved corrective treatment for Acid Stomach, Flatulence, Pregnancy-Heartburn and other Digestive Ailments is "Dr. Jenner's Absorbent Lozenges"—the 150 years old specific, introduced by Dr. Jenner of Vaccination fame.

Send a 2d. stamp for Literature and Sample in handy container—just right for slipping in handbag or attache case—the contents will demonstrate the efficacy of "Dr. Jenner's Absorbent Lozenges," and it can be refilled from the 1/5 & 3/4½ (incl. Purchase Tax) sizes sold by Chemists everywhere. Savory & Moore Ltd., Pharmaceutical Department, 143 New Bond Street, London, W.1 (J.28)

HOW TO STIMULATE HUMAN METABOLISM

"Run-down-ness" Due to War Conditions

IT is a common experience of doctors and nurses in war-time to be called upon to treat people who say they "feel run-down."

The phrase is usually perfectly apt. For it is frequently found that what the patient is suffering from is depressed metabolism.

The processes in the body that sustain life — the break-down of food to simpler constituents; the resultant creation of warmth and energy; and the new building-up of complex substances with which to supply fresh material to the tissues — these processes have slowed down. The metabolic rate (really the "living rate") is lowered.

This slowing down of the metabolic rate occurs after illness, prolonged strain or shock.

But it is the food we eat that sets our metabolic machinery in motion. And, unfortunately, one of the symptoms of depressed metabolism is a complete loss of appetite. That is the vicious circle. The problem is to break it.

CLINICAL TESTS

In view of the importance of this problem under present conditions, a famous research institution has made a specific clinical study of it since the war.

Normal men and women were selected and their basal metabolism established. Then various accepted preparations for raising the metabolic rate were administered.

Over and over again, one well-known aid to convalescence achieved the best results. It was Brand's Essence. The graphs showed that, on taking half a bottle of Brand's Essence of Chicken, the subject's rate of metabolism rose quickly and was sustained longer than when other meat preparations, savoury meat extracts, home-made broths, etc., were taken.

This was a scientific confirmation and explanation of something that doctors repeatedly experience: that the "turning-point" in an illness occurs when Brand's Essence is administered. If you have a patient making a difficult recovery from an illness, you will be well advised to order Brand's Essence. A few spoonfuls will immediately increase the metabolic rate. Appetite will return, and presently the patient will have a new zest, new energy, a feeling of being gloriously alive again.

The limited supplies of Brand's Essence are being distributed on a strictly fair basis.

VEGETABLES IN BOTTLES

ready-strained...

...mineral salts and vitamins conserved

STRAINED VEGETABLES are an essential item in the modern baby's diet. Now you can get ready-strained vegetables in bottles. A busy mother's most tedious job is done for her by Brand & Co. Ltd., and the vegetables are better for baby than those prepared at home.

Brand's vegetables are steam-cooked and packed in vacuum.
The vitamins, as well as iron, calcium and phosphorus, are conserved.
They are so finely strained that not a particle of irritant fibre remains.

As a general rule they can be given at the end of the fourth month—the Bone and Vegetable Broth even before this.

SPINACH · CARROTS
BEETROOT · PRUNES
Picked at their prime; steam-cooked in vacuum; packed in glass bottles.

Also BONE AND VEGETABLE BROTH

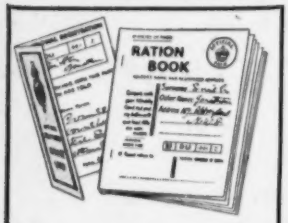
HOW TO GET YOUR NEW RATION BOOKS

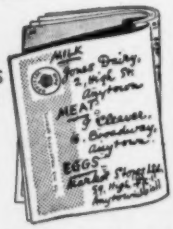
CUT THIS OUT FOR REFERENCE



1. See that the particulars on your identity card and food ration books (both buff and green) are correct, and that they agree. If these are not exactly the same, do not alter them yourself, but take both to your Food Office immediately.

2. Fill in page 3 of your present ration book (the Reference Leaf) including Section Z. But do not cut out this page.

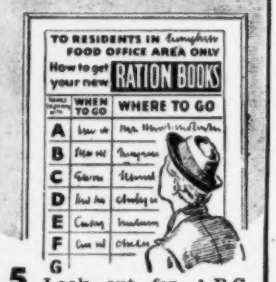
GENERAL (Buff) BOOK



CHILD'S (Green) BOOK

3. On page 4 of the General (buff) Book (the back of the Reference Leaf), write the name and address of your present Milk retailer. On page 4 of the Child's (green) Book, write the names and addresses of the child's present Milk, Meat, and Eggs retailers. Never mind the printing; write on top of it. Do not take out the page.

4. Make sure that page 38 of your present ration book has been properly filled in.



5. Look out for A.B.C. posters like this in local cinemas, post offices, food offices, etc., and for advertisements in your local papers. Opposite your initial you will see where you should call and when. The office will be situated in your own food control area. It's no use going to any other place, or at any other time, than that shown on the poster or advertisements.

The new books and cards will be prepared and issued in alphabetical order of surnames. If there are different surnames in your household, it will mean more than one visit, but less waiting when you get there.

A friend can go for you, but only at the time and place advertised for your surname.

6. Take your identity card and present ration book when you go for your new ones. You need not take personal points or clothing book. You will be given your new food ration book with personal points and clothing book (bound together but detachable) and, if you are over 16, a new identity card.

Solutions of MILTON indicated in the ENVELOPE IRRIGATION TREATMENT

a 20% solution of Milton is used :

(1) because it is sufficiently hypertonic to inaugurate effective transudation without excessive tissue dehydration.

(2) because at this concentration its action on the exudates and necrotic tissue promotes thorough cleansing of the wound.

(3) because its germicidal power is adequate for the control of infection, when present.

(4) because at this concentration the cleansing action is of great supplementary value to any surgical debridement which may be necessary. Where involvement is extensive, or with the hypersensitive patient, initial cleansing may be carried out simultaneously with the debridement under light general anaesthesia. The 20% solution of Milton also appears to increase the tolerance of the sensitive patient to subsequent routine irrigations with 5% Milton.

FOR ROUTINE IRRIGATIONS 5%

a 5% solution of Milton is used :

(1) because it is isotonic and, therefore, causes neither transudation nor maceration provided proper attention is paid to the drainage of the envelope and the drying of the limb after each irrigation is completed.

(2) because its strength is sufficient to cleanse the wound without impeding normal healing of the tissues.

(3) because at this concentration its germicidal power also is adequate for the continued control of infection.
